Stories from the past

Don't Stand Still

I have been with the club for many years and have trained several different breeds (I'm not bias) and one of these dogs was a rottweiler named Tye. He was a beautiful boy, who thought he was a sheltie. He would try to run under the coffee table, try to jump on the bed, which was hard to do for a big dog. He had a heart of gold and was very gentle.

On this particular day he and I were doing some trial training and part of that was heeling around a figure "8". The day was wet and the two people standing as the figure 8 posts had wellington boots on.

Well, as we were going around the person, with Tye on the inside and being a male dog, he did what they do best..... yes.....he cocked his leg and the wee went into this gentleman's boot. Oh dear!!!! I was very embarrassed and the gentleman was not impressed. How many times can you say, "sorry"

Stories from the past

The old English Sheepdog

Many years ago (in our early days), we used to train on some Lacrosse grounds, off Grand Junction Rd.,

Back then we were only a small club and I can remember that I had my first sheltie that I was training and I had never trained a dog before. Every Sunday you could hear this dog barking from miles away. This was a sign that one of the members was coming with his dog and a mate of his, who also was training his dog.

Then you would see coming off Grand Junction Rd, this small car. In the back of this car was an old English sheepdog, barking his head off, with his head out the window taking up the whole back seat.

When you took a look at the driver/owner of the dog, you would see a big man, wearing a pair of industrial ear muffs, with his window down to drown out the sound of the dog barking. It was the funniest thing I had ever seen.

Its the little ones you have to look out for

Back in the day, people would come around to read your meters for the electricity. At our house, we had a gate that was down the side of the house and you would have to enter the gate to read the meter.

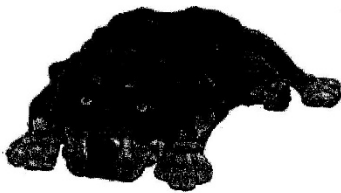

At this time, I had two shelties and the Rotty, Tye. One of the shelties was named Toby and he was the alpha (would you believe) and all the others would back him up. Well, we started to receive "estimated" accounts for our electricity and couldn't think why, until one day when I happened to be home from work sick.

I heard the side gate go and saw the meter man enter through this gate. Then I heard my sheltie going nuts down the side. Must say there is nowhere to go once you are in this area except through the gate again. I then heard an almighty slam as the gate closed abruptly.

I saw the meter man come out of the gate in a hurry. I went outside to talk to him, to see what had happened.

He said he saw the "little" sheltie come racing down the side of the house and thought nothing much of it, then he saw the rotti stick his head around the corner (who would have said, "hello") and that was when he got scared and ran.

Little did he know that it was the sheltie he had to look out for. All the rotti would have done is lick him all over (all 50kgs of him). The sheltie weight only 7kgs.
